Perfect Receivables* group number: Obtain from the detail tranjournal or positions 4-13 of the file header (type 1) record in the data file.

Return code: Refer to the ACH Quick Reference for a list of codes. When returning items with return code R10 (unauthorized), you must attach a Written Statement of Unauthorized Debit to the request.

Process/effective entry date: Effective entry (posting) date of the item being returned.

Credit/debit: Check the debit column if the item was a debit. Check the credit column if the item was a credit.

Checking/savings: Obtain from the summary tranjournal or the transaction code in positions 2-3 of the entry detail (type 6) record in the data file. Checking accounts use transaction codes 21-29. Savings accounts use transaction codes 31-39.

Perfect Receivables* account number: For account range customers, the WPIC identifying your client account. For single-account customers, your Wells Fargo Perfect Receivables account number.

Dollar amount: Exact dollar amount of the transaction.

Trace number: Unique number assigned to the entry by the originating institution. The first eight digits are the routing/transit number of the sending institution.

Important: Provide ALL necessary information. If the form is incomplete or information is incorrect, additional research will be required and Wells Fargo cannot guarantee that the items will be processed within the timelines requested.

Return requests must be received prior to 3:00 p.m. Central Time (1:00 p.m. Pacific Time) and within the timeframes specified by NACHA for return entries. If we receive the request after the deadline or outside of the timeframes specified by NACHA, the return may not be processed successfully.

If you do not initiate the return of a debit entry in a timely manner, you lose your right to return, and any dispute must then be negotiated outside of the ACH payment system.
